Buggitt & Post sold five lots on Oak Ridge avenue, to E. Z. Burdick. The lots are now being cleared for the purpose of building five modern cottages thereon.

Francis R. Chapman, of Philadelphia, has rented the Troubadour cottage on Ocean Boulevard, Seabreeze, for the season. He and his family moved in, yesterday.

The marriage of Miss Mabel H. Stephens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Stephens, of Toledo, Ohio, to Asa Taylor Buttrill, one of the leading business men of Jackson, Ga., was quietly solemnized at high noon, Jan. 4, at St. Mary's Episcopal church, by the Rev. Mr. Arnold, of Daytona, Fla.

The next best thing to having credit is having money.

Sometimes the people who sit in debtors are better off and sometimes they are better.

When men and wife are truly one it is usually the story of the lion and the lamb.

A man rarely has the courage of his convictions when his sweetheart's life is the brother is the subject of consideration.

CAUSTIC CURVES.

Why a Nephrite Ring Thru a Heart Shaped Reduction.

It is found that in concrete splintered mirrors the reduced rays only come to a definite focus in the point, when the angular aperture of the mirror does not exceed eight or ten degrees. With a larger aperture the rays collected near the edge of the side of the mirror at a point nearer the surface than those from points immediately around the center. This being so, and the curve of the mirror being continuous, a corresponding curve of successive focal points is formed in space, and is rendered visible by the rays falling on a reflecting surface, such as a sheet of white paper or a tablecloth.

The nephrite ring is a cylinder and possesses the properties of the mirror. The rays falling upon portions near the center of the ring are brought to a different focus than those falling near the edge, and thus produce the peculiar heart shaped reduction.

These figures are known as "caustic by reflection," and can be well observed by allowing the light of a candle to fall on the handle of a cup or tumbler partly filled with milk.

Copper and the Pouches.

James Freeman Cooper, once upon a day, caught a man on his ground stealing some of his best apples. At the sight of Mr. Cooper the man began to run away. Cooper called him and told him that he was not only doing wrong, but had wronged him, for if a stranger saw people steal apples, he would be sure to get a few apples or vegetables they would come to the conclusion that he (Cooper) was a miserly, ill natured and ungenerous person. If he wanted any such thing he should come in to buy at the fruit gate, like an honest man. All his baskets and freely receive with the best wishes of an open heart—Schneiderman.

Miss Belle Rogers.

"You are not afraid to be poor?" asked the weeping waiter by the bedside.

"No," whispered the chronic knicker, "but it does worry me to think that I shall soon be with the silent majority when all of my life I have so enjoyed being in the noisy minority."

ALWAYS ROOM FOR MORE

Daytona Has More Visitors at Present Than Any Previous Season in the Month of January.

J. C. Lusk, the affable and enterprising Florida passenger agent for the Southern Railway, who was in Daytona last week, is mentioned in a recent issue of the Jacksonville Times-Union as follows: "J. C. Lusk, district passenger agent of the Southern Railway, has returned from a few days' tour on the East Coast of Florida. Mr. Lusk reports that all the hotels on the East Coast now open are filled and the managers report many bookings for the near future."

"Daytona especially," said Mr. Lusk, "is filled with tourists and every available room in the hotels and boarding houses are occupied. It seems as though the Florida East Coast train unloaded at that point."

While Daytona has many more guests than any previous season at this time, there is room for hundreds, yes, thousands still. The Daytona hotel men are far sighted, and during the summer months of them have doubled their capacity for taking care of the visitors from the snow-bound North who will look for a few months in the balmy sunshine of Florida. No one need fear but that they can obtain accommodations in most any of the numerous hotels and boarding houses. Furnished rooms, however, will soon be at a premium.

A few years ago Daytona was known to a few hundred persons in the North as the prettiest little hamlet in Florida. Today the city is known wherever civilized tongue is spoken as one of the greatest winter resorts, not only in Florida, but in the whole world.

To the beautiful drives, the enchanting river, the stately and shady trees and the marvelous beach can also attribute this great notoriety.

Taken to Chattanooga.

Z. F. Williams, of Oak Hill, was brought before a commission appointed by County Judge McCrory, at DeLand, one day recently and adjudged insane, and is now at the state hospital for persons not composita, at Chattanooga.

Thirty years ago, on the plains of Texas, Williams was riding a frisky broncho when the animal "bucked" and threw him to the ground, crushing his skull. After a time he recovered, to all appearances, and moved to Florida with his family.

A number of years ago he acted different from ordinary and evidenced a desire to annihilate his family. He was sent to the asylum and after a few months was discharged as cured.

During the month of October Dr. G. W. Worley, of St. Augustine, performed an operation on Williams' head, hoping to remove the cause of his trouble, but the lapse of so many years since the time of the accident rendered a cure impossible. Last week the unfortunate man was taken violently insane and was immediately brought to DeLand.

Shall The County Bond?

This is a question that the people of DeLand, at least, answer strongly in the affirmative. A movement was set on foot several months ago to induce the county commissioners to bond the county for the purpose of building a system of hard surfaced roads. The DeLand Business Men's League was organized and have been agitating the movement very strongly.

One of the roads to be considered first should the funds become available should be a road from Daytona to the county seat. This, according to the estimate of the government good roads expert, who was in Daytona a few weeks ago, would cost $70,000, but the DeLandites interested think that not so much cash would be required.

The project of bonding was brought to the commissioners at a recent meeting and they intimated that if a majority of the property holders of the county signified a desire for an election to decide the matter, they would call one.

Nothing would be a better investment for both Daytona and DeLand than the good highway between the two cities, and once it was built the citizens of the county would wonder how they ever lived without it.

Let the good work go on.

G. M. Leary, Miss E. L. McLaury, Mr. and Mrs. P. Oberholt, Alvin Oberholt and Miss Nellie Vort, New York; Mrs. Murray R. Kendrick, J. H. Kendrick, and A. Scott, Evansville; J. R. Williams, Tampa; E. F. Price and wife, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; S. R. Harris, Philadelphia are recent arrivals at the Clarendon.

There are in every town and city a few automobile drivers who exceed the speed limit and keep us on the quiz looking for accidents. It is to these reckless drivers that the low speed limitations which are speedily enforced. Every driver should endeavor to run within the 10-mile an hour limitation now in force, thereby preventing accidents or a lower speed limit.

NEW LINES FOR WESTERN UNION

Will Be Established Over the River. Office to be Opened at the Club House.

B. F. Dillon, superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, was in the city, yesterday, at the invitation of the automobile club.

Mr. Dillon was taken on an automobile trip to Ormond, Seabreeze, Cocoa and to the F. E. C. Automobile Club House. He expressed himself as being delighted with the great improvements made since he last visited here and seemed surprised to see such fine hotels and dwellings en route on his trip.

He has promised to install a line across the river to the club house and will place two operators there during the season. He has also stated that the force in the Daytona telephone office will be increased.

Mr. Stock, president of the F. E. C. A. A. Louis Adler and Mr. Tucker accompanied Mr. Dillon on this tour of inspection. To Mr. Stock is due the credit for the improvements which will be made in the telephone service here, which has been much needed.

The enlargement of this force will enable citizens and reporters to reach notes of the races and any other important events to their distant friends.

Great Hunting Trip.

Several of the local sports got together, recently, and planned a big hunting trip for the heat waters of the Halifax.

When the Illinois, Capt. Ekey commanding, left she had on board Jim M. Pappay, John Dorsett, marshal of Seabreeze, Mr. Hutchins, Joe. Hany and Wm. Buggitt, the Annals of the party states that 20 ducks, several deer, bear quail and squirrels game were killed.

Bingham & Malcy's property on Valley street, Seabreeze, was sold yesterday to E. Z. Burdick.

His Sole Regret.

"You are not afraid to die, are you?" asked the weeping watcher by the bedside. "No," whispered the chronic kicker, "but it does worry me to think that I shall soon be with the silent majority when all of my life I have so enjoyed being in the noisy minority."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK I

that your office stationery was an index of your business when sent to your correspondents in distant cities. The best is none to good for your use.

The Gazette-News job rooms will furnish this kind at a price no higher than for the ordinary kind.

The Gazette-News

THE GAZETTE-NEWS is a weekly newspaper published at Daytona, Florida, by Geo. F. Crouch, in the interest of Daytona and vicinity, is Democratic in political flavor, and is an advocate of prosperity, peace and good roads for our citizens. Its columns are devoted to bringing before our readers a brief and authentic account of the happenings of this place and of the adjoining communities.
Our local writers are ever on the lookout for news items and are assisted by good correspondents from all nearby towns.

The Northerner who spends his winters here, the occasional winter resident, or those who are now making their first visit to our City, could invest no money where it would give them greater enjoyment for a year than $1.50 spent for a subscription to the GAZETTE-NEWS. In the course of a year it will tell the Northern reader what Daytona really is, and if our section of the country would be better suited to him than his present location.

As to health, we firmly believe that Daytona is as healthy a location as any spot in the United States, and is briefly quoted as "Daytona is lost Paradise regained." To tell even briefly our advantages over other sections of the country in Health, Investments, Pleasures, and a place one can call Home, would consume too much space. And as a suggestion, for your personal enjoyment and business relations in the South, that you subscribe now for the GAZETTE-NEWS. We would be pleased to count you as a "Daytona advocate" and a GAZETTE-NEWS Reader.

Washington Star.

Some forty years ago an American who had made a fortune in organizing wrecked railroads appeared at Staten Island, Germany.

He was called by the name of Baden Baden, and it was not long before he had secured the secret of their life.

His play soon attracted universal attention, and he was everywhere watched intently by every one present.

He had accomplished his object. Then Mr. Wulff suddenly went into a condition of exultation, awaiting some other point of attack for his transgression.

One morning he was sitting on a bench in the grounds where the casino stood, when a lady with her maid started with her maid. Then he sat down again. Presently her husband rose and moved away, leaving her handmaid on the bench.

Wulff stared at the man a few moments. Then it rushed upon him that he had been "double-crossed" by his own maid.

"Oh, monster!" exclaimed the lady and followed up the exclamation by a burst of a lot of French.

Wulff was sitting at a hotel, but soon after Wulff and her maid were at a hotel. She had heard of Wulff's coup at the casino, and all Europeans being either gamblers or lovers of the casino, she conceived a great admiration for the American, who had won the big prize, and Wulff pinned himself in the interjection of a very angry, but she soon recovered her temper, although she permitted him to call on her, and he did not forget the difference in their rank. An attendant of some sort was always present at their meetings.

Her highness decided to know Wulff's method of breaking the bank, and he tried to explain it to her, but she couldn't understand it, and, to tell the truth, the money was largely due to his unskillful losses, which he knew by instinct was his downfall.

"You shall break the bank again," said the princess. "I will be there to see, and after it is all over you shall come to sup with me, and we will celebrate the event in my hall."

Wulff agreed, and the next evening he was at the casino, and he was there while the princess sat behind watching him. He would bet on one card, losing and continue to bet without change on the same card, doubling the amount.

At last, however, he lost, and this was what was approved, the rest of it being based on certain probabilities of probabilities. Nevertheless he seemed confident that he would break the bank and did so about 2 o'clock in the morning.

He stuffed his winnings in his pocket, and he was in a hurry to get out of the casino, and he was in a hurry to get out of the casino, and he was in a hurry to get out of the casino.

HER HIGHNESS

[Original.]

Some forty years ago an American who had made a fortune in organizing wrecked railroads appeared at Baden Baden, Germany. Baden Baden at that time was what Monte Carlo is now, the gambling resort for all Europe. The American, Benedict Wuffles, was in fact a smart fellow. He had unlimited means, with which he set to work to break the bank at Baden Baden, and it was not long before he found the secret of how to do so. His play soon attracted universal attention, and his operations were watched intently by every one present till he had accomplished his object. Then Mr. Wuffles suddenly sank into a condition of ennui, awaiting some other point of attack for his tremendous brain.

One morning he was sitting on a bench in the grounds where the casino stood, when a lady with her maid came and sat on a neighboring bench. The woman spoke in the French language, and Mr. Wuffles did not understand what they said, but there was one word he had learned while gazing at royalty in Paris, the prefix "highness," or "altesse," in French. Wuffles noticed that the lady's maid constantly addressed her as "altesse." The first time she did so Wuffles picked up his ears. The second time he moved restlessly in his seat, and after that he got up and walked before the lady in order to observe her face. He saw a very beautiful woman. Then he sat down again. Presently her highness arose and moved away, leaving her handkerchief on the bench. Wuffles seized it and followed her, appearing suddenly at her side holding his hat in one hand and in the other the handkerchief.

"Oh, monsieur!" exclaimed the lady and followed up the exclamation by rattling off a lot of French. "I don't understand, altesse. I don't speak French. I am an American."

"Oh, I see," replied the lady in broken English. "I am much obliged for my handkerchief, but I am troubled that you should know my rank. I am traveling incognito."

Well, to make a long story short, the lady turned out to be the Princess Marie Ernestine Amalia Wilhelmina of Saxe-Weimar-Holstein—that is, she was the princess to Wuffles and her maid, though to all else at Baden she was plain "Fraulein von Wittenburg. She was stopping at a hotel, but soon after Wuffles met her rented for a month a small furnished villa. She had heard of Wuffles' coup at the casino, and, all Europeans being either gamblers or interested in gamblers, she conceived a great admiration for the American. She invited Wuffles to her villa, and Wuffles plumed himself in the anticipation of a love affair, but she soon showed him that, although she permitted him to call on her, she did not forget the difference in their rank. An attendant of some sort was always present at their meetings.

Her highness desired to know Wuffles' method of breaking the bank, and he tried to explain it to her, but she couldn't understand it, and, to tell the truth, the success was largely due to his unlimited means, which he knew by instinct how to handle.

"You shall break the bank again," said the princess. "It will be there to see, and after it is all over you shall come to sup with me, and we will celebrate the event."

Wuffles agreed, and the next evening he appeared at the gambling tables, while the princess sat behind watching him. He would bet on one card, losing, and continue to bet without change on the same card, doubling the amount, till he won. This was all of his plan that was apparent, the rest of it being based on certain mental calculations of probabilities. Nevertheless he seemed confident that he would break the bank and did so about 2 o'clock in the morning. He stuffed his winnings in his pockets. The princess slipped her little hand within his arm and led him to her carriage. In ten minutes they were in her supper room before a table loaded with delicacies. Two or three acquaintances were also present for propriety's sake.

Wuffles was in glory. Once he forgot the difference in rank between himself and his hostess and squeezed her hand but was sharply recalled to himself by a hauteur that chilled him to the marrow.

"Pardon me, your highness," he said "I forgot myself."

The princess smiled kindly and it token of her forgiveness offered him her own unfinished glass of wine. Wuffles drank it off in an ecstasy.

The next thing Wuffles knew it was morning. He was in bed, and a mar was standing over him with a paper in his hand. It proved to be an unpaid bill for rent for the villa, made out in his name.

"But where is"—He must not give up the princess and hesitated.

"Oh, they've gone. The woman took the house in your name. She said she was your wife, but I knew better than that. She's been here before."

Wuffles stared at the man a few moments. Then it rushed upon him that he had been "done." But he was good grit, and his pride kept him up.

"All right," he said. "I'll pay."

He knew well enough that his winnings of the night before were gone and did not look for them. Instead, he told the man to come to his hotel later on and he would receive his money. Before Wuffles left the villa he had also agreed to pay for the supplies "the princess" was indebted for—she had paid none of them, besides running up sundry miscellaneous bills, all in Wuffles' name—and he at last paid for the supper which had been ordered to celebrate his coup at the casino.

DAYTONA is situated upon the west bank of the Halifax River at its fairest expanse and midway between its source at Bulow Bay and its outlet at Mosquito Inlet. It is in latitude 28, seventy-four miles from St. Augustine and one mile from the Atlantic Ocean, and is acknowledged to be without a rival for beauty among the villages of the South. Its site is upon what is known as high hammock land that was crowned by nature with a most regal growth of majestic forest trees, and among these trees is the town of today, with its beautiful cottages and well-graded walks and streets. The result is that all about the wide avenues that cut across the town are lovely lawns and water ways and lawns, many of them draped with graceful festoons of the gray Spanish moss, that overarch the street and walks, and among these are interspersed tall tropical palm-trees, glossy-leaved magnolias, fragrant bay and coral-berried holly, and many other varieties, while in many places the wild grape, the trumpet vine and the amplexoid climber cling among the branches forming shady bowers and adding grace and beauty.

The town lies parallel with the Halifax River, and extends for nearly two miles along the shore. This river is the delight of the angler and the yachtsman and forms one of the town's greatest attractions.

The main avenues that run parallel with or intersect the river are all 100 feet wide, except Beach street, which is about sixty-five feet, but has a half-mile of open, beautiful water abutting upon its eastern side, where the salt waves ebb and flow and along and across which comes the cooling, invigorating and health-giving breezes from off the wide Atlantic, which temper and render the Halifax climate one of the most perfect in the world. Daytona has many miles of well-graded, macled and shelled roads and streets, rendering it the

and added to these, but a mile away, are thirty miles of smooth, hard beach, that affords an unrivalled course for long-distance cycling and driving or automobile racing. No town of equal size, North or South, numbers so many wheelmen, and cycling is a favorite pastime with the tourists summer and winter.

The Beautiful Cottages that have been erected during the past years and are being built are rendering Daytona as famous for its fine homes as for its beautiful river, trees and avenues, and they are adding yearly to its attractions.

Not the least of these attractions to those securing homes in the South, and ranking second only to healthfulness and perfection of climate, is the fact that its population is chiefly composed of cultivated and intelligent people, accustomed to the refinements of home and social life. Added to these features are good churches, good public and private schools, stores, hotels, laundry, meat markets, novelty works, an opera house, electric lights for street and house illumination, a good telephone system, ice factory, Lily Water Works, and hot and cold baths, etc., and everything else can be procured that is necessary to make life comfortable. An important feature in the healthfulness of this town is the

which is derived from numerous flowing wells, of which there are probably 300 in the corporate limits. This flow is secured by boring wells to the depth of from 80 to 120 feet, passing through several strata of rock, and this depth assures purity from all surface contamination. The water is slightly impregnated with magnesia and iron, and holds sulphur in the shape of gas, which soon passes away.

The Population of Daytona proper is about 1,800. Added to this is a suburban population on main shore and peninsula of about 1,000 at Kingston, Blake, Old Seabreeze or Goodall, Seabreeze and Silver Beach, which are properly a part of the town and population.

lies one mile east of the town. It is approached by three good bridges over the river and well-graded avenues, and is the principal summer resort south of St. Augustine. It has more tourists during the summer than all other places south of that city combined, and is also becoming a favorite winter resort. The beach is wide, firm and smooth, by many considered the finest in the world, and the surf bathing is safe and excellent summer and winter. People who have tried Northern and Western summer resorts declare that there are none so perfect in comfort as Daytona beach.

Automobile Race Meet.
The Florida East Coast Automobile Association conducts an annual race meet on the beach, which has now a universal reputation as the greatest automobile race course in the world. The Daytona-Ormond Beach is hard as macadam, and an ideal stretch of thirty or more miles without a break makes it the natural racing ground for America.

At low tide the beach is bare for 300 feet and neither carriage wheel, bicycle or pedestrian can make a hardly visible imprint on the smooth and well-packed sand. It is no uncommon sight to see sail-rigged bicycles speeding with the velocity of the wind before a stiff breeze along the smooth beach, thus affording the most exhilarating sport known to man. Besides these, miles of hard-shelled, palm-fringed boulevards bring the lovers of the wheel and vehicles into direct touch with the mainland over the broad bridges which span the splendid Halifax River.

The beach from the sandy bluffs to the lowest point at oblique, measures about 500 feet, and the average depth of the surf measures about two feet. A continuous gentle swell rolls in from the ocean from one to two feet in depth under normal conditions, making the beach an attractive and absolutely safe place for surf-bathing. Here the infant as well as the gray-haired veteran of many summers, can safely enjoy the luxury of a sea bath throughout the larger part of the year, while the strong and expert swimmer, can venture out further to test his strength and skill in battling with the inexhaustible powers of the mighty ocean.

The Peninsula
lying between river and ocean is one-half mile wide, and is being rapidly improved, and there are many fine cottages and several good hotels, an opera house, two ocean piers, beach pavilion and a large casino.

A Remarkable Feature
at Daytona has been the yearly improvement in the style and value of the buildings that are being erected for homes. Men of capital of the North and West have become awakened to its advantages for winter residences, and valuable lots are being purchased and costly houses, beautiful in design and finish, are being erected, and beautiful homes, the abodes of wealth and culture are multiplying.

Seabreeze (City Beautiful) and Goodall are settlements on the Ocean side of the peninsula across the Halifax River from Daytona. At the foot of Ocean Boulevard, Seabreeze, a pier reaches 600 feet across the beach into the swelling surf of the ocean. This pier is a favorite resort of those who delight in the sport of fishing. The surf here abounds in trout, pompano, yellowtail, cavalle, whiting, drum, sheepshead and many other varieties of edible fish. During the fall season the famous sea bass affords royal sport, and it has been no uncommon occurrence to land a thousand pounds of this gamey fish in an afternoon. Individuals of them ranging from fifteen to thirty-five pounds in weight. Not only does the ocean offer this splendid sport but the Halifax River, only half a mile back of the ocean, is equally famous for its fine fishing, and the varieties that abound in the ocean are present in the river.

The FATE OF A DREAMER

Emery Melvin was a ne'er do well. A friend of his once said to him, "Emery, you're a dreamer, and the worst kind of a one." That made the young fellow sick at heart, but he loved a girl who comforted him by saying: "Never mind, Emery. If you were made a dreamer the worst kind of a one means that you are very much of a dreamer, and it's better to be a good deal of one thing than a little of everything."

However, Emery gave up dreaming for awhile—at least he thought he did—went to work at the trade he had learned, carpentry, and married Hope Clark, the girl who had comforted him. But it was not long before he fell to dreaming again. He worked daily at his trade, but made a very poor success at it. His mind was not on his work, but on fanciful pictures that were constantly coming up before him. A troop of actors coming to the town where he lived, he went to see them. The next day while he was sawing boards and driving nails he was constructing a play. For several years he continued to conjure up characters, making them move, puppet fashion, before his brain in various combinations. Then he gradually developed a plan. He knew nothing about playwriting, but a natural instinct told him that he must invent the things that his puppets would do before writing out what they would say. So he took some checkers and marked them with the names of his characters and moved them on and off his supposed stage, which was the checkerboard, and in this way they performed for him.

Meanwhile his wife stood by him. She wished he was not a dreamer, but if he had not been she would not have loved him so well. She took good care of what little money he earned and made it go a great way. But children were coming on rapidly, and the poor woman was worked nearly to death.

One day when Emery was out of a job he concluded to go to the city and submit his play to an expert. He did so, and the expert handed the play back to him with the verdict that it was rubbish. Emery was not used to stagecraft, he said, and had a lot of impossible situations. Emery, very much discouraged, went back home with his manuscript, but his wife, whose name was well chosen, bid him not despair, but send it around to theatrical managers. He did so, but at last became suspicious that the manuscript was not being read. Before sending it out again he stuck together several of the pages in different parts, and when the manuscript came back to him these pages had not been separated, showing that his suspicions were correct. Then he put his play in a closet, where it lay for several years, the dust gradually thickening upon it.

One day he saw in a newspaper that a certain manager who had been hounded by dramatic authors because he produced such poor plays and declined their very good ones had decided to offer a prize of $500 for a play. The judges were not to be the regular dramatic readers, but representative literary men and women. Emery bundled up his play and sent it to the address given.

It was three months after this and the whereabouts of the play were almost forgotten when one day Emery received notice that his play had won the prize. A check for $500 was inclosed, with a blank receipt and a note stating that within two months the play would be put on the stage.

The coming of the play did not seem to make much of a stir in dramatic circles. Hope saw an item in a newspaper sneeringly referring to the manager's prize plan as an advertising dodge that would not pay, but she burned the paper before her husband saw it. At first Emery had great expectations for his play, but his wife, fearing that he would be disappointed, told him that she doubted if more than the $500 received would come of it. But that was for them a great deal.

The night for the first performance came, and the next day Emery, who had shrunk from being present at a failure, eagerly seized a morning paper as soon as it came up from the city. His play was dismissed by the critics in a few sneering lines. He bought other papers and found where there were comments they were severe criticisms, though one or two papers said the audience was a very kindly disposed one and gave the play proper attention. In the evening came a letter from the manager saying that he believed the play would do fairly well and might run perhaps thirty nights.

A few days later Emery received a telegram to come to the city at once. He reached the theater that night just before the close of the third act and entered a house crowded with an enthusiastic audience. When the curtain went down there was a wild yell for the author. The manager dragged Emery, in his work clothes, on the stage. The audience seemed puzzled at his appearance, and some one cried: "We don't want the stage carpenter. We want the author." The manager explained, and there was a thunder of applause.

Emery was badly "rattled." He asked the manager how he could get his wife and children to town, and the manager telegraphed, "Come with the kids at once and bolster up your husband."

The next night Hope sat in a private box and saw her husband's triumph, laughing and weeping by turns. That was the beginning of the celebrated play, "The Old Oaken Bucket," which ran 250 nights and made the great playwright Emery Melvin.

THE MILK TEST.

How You May Discover if Your Digestion is Perfect.

Milk is known to be one of the few complete foods. It contains the bone, muscle and fat producing elements and sustains the heat of the body. The milk of different classes of animals (mammals) varies in composition to suit the different requirements; thus mare's milk is richer in sugar, but lacking in protein, compared with cow's milk.

Another fact of interest connected with milk is found in the difficulty with which some persons digest plain milk. It is safe to say that should any organ, secretion or digestive juice fail to perform its free duty the milk consumed will not be properly digested. The reason for this is simple. Milk contains such a variety of compounds that all portions of the digestive system are called into activity for the digestion of these varied elements. The gastric juice attacks the cheesy matter; the pancreatic and intestinal juices digest the sugars and fats. This takes the milk through the stomach and the small intestines into the large intestine. The lower intestine digests wood fiber also. This alone of all the forms of food nutrients is not found in milk. Because of the facts above stated the ability to drink milk is a test of perfect digestion in nearly all cases.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE LEGEND OF JAPAN.

Origin of Dai Nippon, According to Shinto Mythology.

According to the Shinto mythology, in the beginning chaos reigned, and in it were contained the germs of all things. From chaos was evolved a race of heavenly beings termed "celestial kami," of whom Izanagi, a male, and Izanami, a female, were the last.

These two were instructed by the other deities to descend from heaven and beget islands, and to help them on their mission they were presented with a jeweled spear. Standing on a bridge floating in the ether, they reached down and stirred the brine and then drew up the spear. The brine that dripped from this weapon was heaped up and became the island of Onogoro, and on it the pair descended and begat several other islands.

The first of these was Hirugo, but as it did not meet with the approval of the deities it was put into a boat and allowed to float away. The next was the island of Awa, and so in succession were produced the remaining islands of the archipelago, now termed by Europeans "Japan," but by the Japanese themselves "Dai Nippon," "The Great Sunrise."

One does not need a search warrant to find a kicker.

The Light That Never Fails.

Far down the somber shaft, where scarce a gleam

Of rosy daylight ever finds its way,
By day or night, the miner, looking up,
Can see the star's far penetrating ray.

And oft, while in some darkened vale of life,
When grief or gloom our peace of mind assails,
We turn our tear stained faces to the skies,
To find in heaven the Light that never fails!

With that we drive the most substantial trade.
